

What is Saké?

A traditional Japanese drink made from fermented rice and water. Saké is often called "rice wine" because, like wine, it contains unique variations of flavors with subtle aromas. It is also often drunk as wine. Traditionally, saké was always served warm in Japan, but in the past 30 - 40 years this has changed somewhat, with more and more saké being served at room temperature or chilled.

Yuzu offers a various selection of saké nowadays. To establish this selection we have been working together with Yoigokochi Importers. They are situated in the Netherlands and are working purely with saké without any additives. All our saké is made from organically produced rice. Saké has a long shelf life after opening, which is why we serve all our saké by the glass or in a Tokkuri, a traditional Japanese tableware which is used for pouring saké.

Yuzu, the Japanese citrus fruit so popular recently in Western restaurants, now as a refreshing drink based on sake. Consisting for 50% of pure and sour yuzu juice, this yuzu-sake is extremely refreshing and completely cleans your palate. Drink on a hot sunny afternoon, as an aperitif, to go with a dessert, as a surprising ingredient of a cocktail, or whenever you need a refreshing kick. Serve ice-cold, either straight or on-the-rocks, to have the best balance between sweet and sour.

Heiwa Shuzō (Peace Brewery) has prewar roots but made a re-start after the war. Like a true Wakayama brewery, it produces both sake and plum sake. Recently the brewery has attracted nation-wide attention because of the new junmaishu line of Kido and the luxurious plum sake and other fruit sake series called Tsuru-ume.

Drink at room temperature or slightly heated up, served in a Tokkuri

Crazily rare sake from Japan's smallest sake brewery, a one-man operation. Painstakingly traditional hand-made sake. Rich in umami and acidity, brilliant to mature. Only 1 tank made.

Situated in the town of Naka at the foot of mountainous national parklands in south-eastern Tokushima, Naka Shuzo has been brewing sake since 1725. The brewery has been in the same family for 11 generations with Akihiro Matsuura now continuing the family's Sake brewing tradition with his wife and daughter. Matsuura-san has been brewing sake for over 40 years, previously working alongside the Toji [Master Brewer] their family employed, until 1985 when he became the Toji himself. Matsuura-san does virtually every part of the Sake brewing process by himself. Naka Shuzo is one of smallest Sake producers in Japan, brewing only 3-4 small tanks of Sake per season. The Asahi Wakamatsu range made by them are some of the most sought after Sake in Japan due to the quality and rarity of these amazing products.

The ultimate proof that fine, balanced sake can be made from almost unpolished rice. Senkin taking their historical philosophy to the next stage: barrel fermented, minimally polished, organic pre-premodern sake.

Senkin Brewery crafts sake that flows with the seasons. At Senkin, water is not just an ingredient; it is the essence of their sake. The same life-giving water that nurtures the rice paddies is interwoven into their brewing process, creating a harmony between cultivation and creation. Senkin prides itself on its original ingredients: the Kamenoo, Yamadanishiki, and Omachi rice varieties. These grains, imbued with the purity of the local underground water vein, form the heart of Domaine Sakura's distinct cepage.

Made from a local variety of organically grown rice, and aged initially for about half a year at room temperature, this medium-bodied dry namazake (unpasteurized sake) has a unique ricy, earthy aftertaste. Mutemuka Shuzō's owner was a pioneer when about thirty years ago, against strong opposition from his neighbour farmers who believed in spraying away any form of life, he introduced organic farming to his sake rice. The result is a very earthy dry sake with a chocolate aroma and aftertaste like no other. Drink at room temperature or warmed up (to enhance the chocolate aroma).

The Mutemuka Shuzō is a small family brewery that was founded in 1893. It is located close to the source of the Shimantogawa, Japan's purest river. The brewery is also well-known for its chestnut shōchū Dabada Hiburi.
